Life Unexpected

by WasFoundChangedName

Summary: Very weird title. Couldnt think of anything better. well my second fanfic and most of it is telling you all my plan about it. Well hope you enjoy it. Story is M because of whats planned later.

Life Unexpected

First off this is my second fic and i hope i did this right and no matter please leave a review. Even if you hate it! Semi-Self Insert (just the name) And i might want O.C's if i need character you all would enjoy. So I'll think about it if the need rises.

Also if you like this series i might not be able to update often cause being a Freshman in High School and a Wreslter (and im very terrible havn't won yet. First year.) And warning you wierd intro. This ain't the story just a intro.

Disclaimer: I do not own Halo or anything related to Bungie or its co-workers. This is just made up in my head.

Spartan Log: Number 26 Eric Sanchez

(1st person view) Life... such a small word yet has great meaning. This one word can do many things, most of which affect other life. It can give more life, yet it can take it away just as easy. It can work together to create great objectives. But everything has a negative... it's was that they each had there own motives, and didn't care for anything else except it's own was the Covenant I wish i would have thought like this before I joined the SPARTAN project. Yet how could I? I was only 7 when they took me. That was of course years ago. The war is long over and now we are all rebuilding our nations hopefully as one. Even though there is still is some recistance with the Brutes, all shall be well for us. Every now and then i would be called upon to give assistance and when done just go through patrols on random planets and checking for trouble. That was until on just a regular nap in my bunk and then everything goes crazy.

End
file.